MOTOROLA EMPOWERMENT GRANTS

MOTOROLA MOBILITY
FOUNDATION

The Motorola Mobility Foundation, the philanthropic arm of Motorola Mobility, is accepting applications for the 2012 Empowerment Grants, a funding program designed to help United States-based nonprofit organizations develop mobile applications and use mobile technology that will help transform and benefit the communities they serve. The program addresses four areas of focus — education, health and wellness, community, and arts and culture.

Successful applications must demonstrate the ways that digital, mobile, and social technology can be used to further a nonprofit organization's mission. Examples include producing a crowd-sourcing site for community resource mapping, creating a digital storytelling application that captures oral histories of a community, developing a resource for social media use to further engage volunteers, and using new ideas of "gamefication in education" to engage students.

Applications may be submitted by groups including nonprofits, teachers, individual schools, school districts, student clubs, affiliates of national nonprofit organizations, librarians, and community organizers. To be eligible, applicants must be a U.S. registered or incorporated 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization or an NCES school or school district; must serve communities in California, Illinois, Massachusetts, Florida, Oregon, Georgia, Texas, or Pennsylvania, or be an online or national program; must be actively collaborating with at least one other nonprofit, social enterprise, or community group; and must be aligned with funding priorities in education, health and wellness, community, or arts and culture.

The total amount of funding for the Empowerment Grants program is $500,000; the program will fund approximately twenty grants. The average grant size is $25,000.

HITACHI GRANTS FOR YOUNG ENTREPRENEURS

The Hitachi Foundation's Yoshiyama Young Entrepreneurs Program seeks to identify and support inspiring young entrepreneurs whose work helps alleviate domestic poverty.

The competitive program is open to young entrepreneurs who are operating viable businesses in the United States with the dual purpose of making a difference and making a living.

Applicants must be at least 18 years old and have been no older than 29 when their business began generating revenue. The business itself must be one to five years old and must have been generating revenue for at least the past twelve months. Applicants must have established their business with the expressed dual purpose of operating a successful business and creating opportunities for low-wealth individuals in the U.S. to enhance their economic security. The business may be structured as a for-profit or nonprofit. If the business is a nonprofit, it must depend primarily on an earned-income revenue model and not depend solely on donations and grants.

Strategies that help enhance economic security might include but are not limited to management practices, including ownership structure, workforce advancement practices, supply-chain protocols, and location decisions; developing a product or service that can alter individual and community circumstances such as improving access to education and training protocols; creating greater access to healthy lifestyle and healthcare products and services; and improving access to asset accumulation such as housing, transportation, and marketable credentials for low-wealth individuals.

Up to five winners will be selected. In addition to a $40,000 grant over two years, the program provides awardees with resources to help take their work and communities to the next level, including leadership development training, business mentoring, technical assistance, and access to a network of peers and advisers.

For complete program guidelines and application procedures, an FAQ, and information on previous winners, visit the Hitachi Foundation Web site (<http://www.hitachifoundation.org/our-work/yoshiyama-young-entrepreneurs-program>).
